

food system change
online congress

Food Policy Councils

Food Policy Councils, as forums of various stakeholders, aim to make the local food system sustainable and equitable. To this end Food Policy Councils establish inclusive dialogues between politicians, administrators, farmers, retailers, restaurateurs and consumers.

- closing the local food governance gap, thus reclaiming control from large corporations
- by including all involved parties, councils tackle important local food issues, e.g. urban agriculture, access to sustainable food for socially disadvantaged, reinforcement of local producers and diverse market structures
- enabling broad cooperation and synergies among stakeholders of the local food system sustainability

potential

